Those arrested will be in great difficulty, and it is guaranteed there will be more searches and arrests in the future. Anyone who has signed a petition, has their name recorded by the police, and has been identified in any photos or videos, regardless of whether they are a frontliner, will not be able to escape. Let alone fighting for the long-term, if we cannot even protect our fellow protesters and their future, there will be no one who dare to stand up against the establishment. The protesters did not commit any real crimes, so they should not be charged.

The government will be able to arrest and charge the protestors under the anti-riot laws, which can result in 6-10 years of jail time. The anti-extradition bill protests will go down in history as riots, where everyone involved will be named a rioter. It means that the 2 million peaceful protesters on the streets will be equated to the leftist, communist-sympathizers who participated in the 1967 riots of Hong Kong (the 1967 rioters are famous for deploying terrorist tactics, planting decoy and real bombs all over the city, and murdering members of the press).
